THE TEST:

The multiple-choice test will be given at a computer terminal. Your score on this test will be used to determine your place on an eligible list. You must achieve a score of at least 70% to pass the test.

The multiple-choice test is designed to assess the extent to which candidates have certain abilities determined to be important to the performance of the tasks of a Sanitation Enforcement Agent. Task areas to be tested are as follows: municipal inspections for violations; writing and preparing summonses; recording hourly activity, types and number of summonses issued, and researching property information; reporting on daily activity and unusual incidents; investigating complaints of unsanitary and/or hazardous conditions received from members of the public; performing field surveys; record keeping and report writing; and preparation of cases relating to summons.

The test may include questions requiring the use of any of the following abilities:

Written Comprehension: understanding written sentences and paragraphs. A Sanitation Enforcement Agent may use this ability to properly understand rules and procedures.

Written Expression: using English words or sentences in writing so that others will understand. A Sanitation Enforcement Agent may use this ability to write reports and summonses clearly and accurately.

Memorization: remembering information, such as words, numbers, pictures and procedures. Pieces of information can be remembered by themselves or with other pieces of information. A Sanitation Enforcement Agent may use this ability to keep track of and document district sites and inspection findings.

Problem Sensitivity: being able to tell when something is wrong or is likely to go wrong. It includes being able to identify the whole problem as well as elements of the problem. A Sanitation Enforcement Agent may use this ability to determine the proper violations when conducting inspections.

Inductive Reasoning: combining separate pieces of information, or specific answers to problems, to form general rules or conclusions. It involves the ability to think of possible reasons for why things go together. A Sanitation Enforcement Agent may use this ability when conducting investigations of public complaints of unsanitary and/or hazardous sites and conditions.

Deductive Reasoning: is the ability to apply general rules to specific problems to come up with logical answers. It involves deciding if an answer makes sense. A Sanitation Enforcement Agent may use this ability when conducting investigations of public complaints of unsanitary and/or hazardous sites and conditions.

The things or actions to be put in order can include numbers, letters, words, pictures, procedures, sentences, and mathematical or logical operations. A Sanitation Enforcement Agent may use this ability when researching property information for issued violations and when entering information into the appropriate database.

Spatial Orientation: is the ability to tell where you are in relation to the location of some objects or to tell where the object is in relation to you. A Sanitation Enforcement Agent may use this ability to determine if businesses or residential properties are in violation of space and distance limitations set by code.

Visualization: is the ability to imagine how something would look when it is moved around or when its parts are moved or rearranged. It requires the forming of mental images of how patterns or objects would look after certain changes, such as unfolding or rotation. One has to predict how an object, set of objects, or pattern will appear after the changes have been carried out. A Sanitation Enforcement Agent may use this ability to map out and assess unusual circumstances and conditions during field work.

Certain questions may need to be answered on the basis of documents or other information supplied to the candidates on the date of the multiple-choice exam.
